Operations Tables - Whole Numbers

This sheet is about completing tables. The tables are addition, multiplication and subtraction. With subtraction ensure the number in the column (up and down) is taken away from the number in the row, otherwise negative answers will occur.

The question mark starts with the number 13 and then the operation in blue is completed, until the last square is filled. All answers are whole numbers so fractions or decimal answers mean that a mistake has been made.

The small tables at the bottom of the page are division. Divide the larger number by the smaller number and then write the answer in the box below.

A blue-bordered box contains the text: "Clicking on the title of the outcome brings up the description of the sheet."

The bottom of the screenshot shows a Windows taskbar with various open applications and the system clock showing 12:57 PM on Sunday, 1/01/2011.

The White House has yet to give an official response to the latest GOP-generated demand from House Republicans to pass an ObamaCare repeal bill. White House Chief of Staff Reince Priebus was "not quite sure" about the latest proposal from House Republicans, but he was very clear about the White House's position. "The House has to take up and pass a bill and they've got to repeal and replace. They're just not going to be able to do that and then just walk away without doing something in the meantime," Priebus told ABC's "This Week" on Sunday. Republicans have failed to come up with a final proposal on how to repeal and replace ObamaCare, but they have said it should include a "stabilization fund" to help people with insurance and a mandatory delay for people in the individual market. The delay would come through an executive order and cover people in the individual market who are now being offered "short-term" insurance for 2018. The plan is the latest in a series of proposals to repeal the law that has become deeply unpopular with the public. Republicans have also talked about using a different budget reconciliation process to repeal ObamaCare without a delay, but that has yet to be put forward. On ABC, Priebus said that President Donald Trump and other Republicans should have worked with Democrats more on ObamaCare during the legislative process. "We should have been able to have a more positive working relationship with them so that when we did repeal and replace, it was something that worked for everybody," Priebus said. "You need to work with the other side of the aisle, and you should be able to talk to them and say this is what it is and it's not good. You should be able to go to them and say let's try and fix this because it doesn't work for anybody. So, that's where it gets kind of muddled."
